

Is frame relay considered a private network and are there any encryption requirements?

PCI SSC FAQ | Article 1043 | April 2012

In general, frame relay can be considered private if it is dedicated to the customer's traffic. The PCI DSS requires encryption for transmission of cardholder data over public networks, not private networks.

Source: <https://www.pcisecuritystandards.org/faqs/1043/>